ARREST MOKENA MAN ON CHARGE MADE BY GIRL, 6

A six year-old Joliet girl, reportedly missing, was the object of a police search Tuesday night, and when she was found her story led to the arrest of Roy M. Shenk, 44 years old, of Mokena, who was served with a warrant Wednesday morning by Capt. Ernest Overbey, charging him with assault with intent to commit rape.

The search started at 9:30 o'clock when the mother of the girl called police, saying the child had been missing since 6 o'clock when she failed to come home after making a number of calls to sell tickets for a church or school festival.

The girl was brought to the police station at 11 o'clock by a Mrs. Takas, New Lenox road, who said the child had been left at her house by an unidentified man with a request that she bring her to Joliet. The man said his truck had become stuck in the mud.

The girl said the man had threatened her.

She then guided Sgt. Wm. Kwaneski and Detective Wm. Burke to a trailer camp near Highland Park where she identified the truck. Shenk's name and address was on the truck.

Kwaneski and Burke found Shenk in a restaurant on Cass St. where he was arrested at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

Questioned by Nicholas J. Forango, Chief of police, and Capt. Overbey that morning, Shenk denied he had harmed the girl.

Police, however, said preliminary medical tests corroborated the child's story.

It is reported that Shenk's case has been moved to the County Court and will be heard before County Judge Glenn Cowing.

Present Citation To Jack Gougar of New Lenox For Meritorious Achievement

The following excerpts are taken from a letter from Aviation Radioman Jack Gougar written to his parents Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gougar Sr. of New Lenox the last of April. There has been publicity on the ghost Wiley which Jack speaks of, in that he was missing for a long time and then was rescued which seemed miraculous. Jack was on this same VT-5 at the time of this battle.

"Three days ago I saw a ghost--it's name is Wiley and he was a Radioman in the old VT-5. During the first part of the attack on the Solomons, Wiley's plane was shot down and he was listed as missing in action. The story is this: The plane was shot down alright and the pilot and bombardier were killed instantly. Wiley floated to the surface just as the plane went out of sight. Shortly after that the life raft popped to the surface as fate would have it, and Wiley lived in the same for 15 days. He finally wound up on an island inhabited by aborigines and there he stayed until the 25th of March. He wouldn't have gotten off then if it hadn't been that an army bomber went into the drink, (Ocean) near there and a scouting party came looking for them. The bomber crew landed on Wiley's island. He was flown back to the states via clipper. Yesterday, he came into the hanger with a photographer at his heels and got me into a picture with him for the newspapers. If you happen to see it, I'm the guy what's squatting in front of the map. The other fellow is Sy-

For the past two weeks hints have been given that something was in the air for Sanger Hall in Tinley Park and now comes the story.

Music for the occasion is to be furnished by Jimmie Duguid and his Caledonians. There will be plenty of refreshments and everyone is invited to help the USO.

Men in uniform will be admitted free.

Be sure to tell your neighbors and friends and have them come with you to this big event.

CAR STOLEN FROM IN FRONT OF MARLEY CHURCH FOUND IN CHICAGO

Edward Marshall's car which had been stolen two weeks ago, while parked in front of the Marley church was found in Chicago last week. It had been taken by three young boys ages 15 to 17, who lived on Chicago's south side. The boys were nice looking and of intelligent appearance and had evidently just been on a 'lark', and didn't realize the meaning of what they had done. They were accompanied by two girls.

Mr. Marshall and Mrs. Mervin Moore attended the trial in the Criminal Court in Chicago last Friday.

The verdict given by the Judge was that the boys were to spend ten nights in the City's Bridewell and after that they are to be put on probation.

This is a goal set two years ago when the school was first organized as a community high school. While accreditation has been granted at this time, progressive development along lines that have been indicated, will be necessary to maintain this accrediting status.

Graduates of the school may now attend the University of Illinois without taking the entrance examinations.

TINLEY BLOOD MOBILE UNIT MESSAGE READ IN LOCAL CHURCHES

The following message regarding the Blood mobile unit coming to Tinley was read in the churches of this section last Sunday:

This is a message from your local Red Cross and through it, from your boys and your neighbors' boys in our armed services all over the world.

They are asking you for a donation, not of money, but of yourself. They are in urgent need of a pint of your blood. For the first time in history, we who must stay at home, are privileged to personally help those who are away: and how glorious is our privilege because our contribution will save the lives of our boys when nothing else will avail. As our armed forces increase and the fighting becomes more fierce, in like proportion do the demands for blood plasma increase.

In order to give the people of our community the opportunity to help in this great undertaking, the Red Cross committees of Frankfort, Lincoln Estates, Midlothian, Oak Forest, Orland Park and Tinley Park have arranged for the mobile unit of the Blood bank to function in this area, using the facilities of the Tinley Park school on June 8 and 9.

Your committees have promised a large number of blood donations to secure the mobile unit for these two days and will, therefore, ask the hearty cooperation of everyone in the community. Every person from 18 to 60, weighing 110 pounds or more, is eligible to donate blood. There is no pain or danger connected with blood donations and people find them to be very interesting experiences.

The list of volunteers must be completed within a few days and we are counting on you. Please get in touch with any Red Cross committee member immediately.

We Must Not Fail Our Boys! You can save a life. With your blood, some boy will return home, who otherwise would surely die. Our boys are depending on us. Don't let them down.

Will Drop Colored Paper Bombs From Planes

Sunday, May 23rd a mock air raid will be staged over the entire Chicago Metropolitan Area and set between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. In case of adverse weather the drill will be postponed to Sunday, June 6th.

Bombs made of newspapers folded into a compact square 2"x2"x1-4" weight about one ounce and with a colored tail or a streamer consisting of crepe paper, each 2" wide and 12" long will be dropped from planes. Red tails indicate incendiary bombs, blue, high explosive bombs, green unexploded bombs and yellow, war gas bombs.

The purpose of this mock air raid is to make a complete test of operating efficiency of the entire Citizens Defense Corps personnel of the Chicago Metropolitan area by simulating, as nearly as possible, actual air raid conditions.

Full instructions regarding the signals to be used, etc. have been sent to all air raid wardens and Civilian Defense officials thruout the area.

In the case of all bombs, except incendiary, red bombs the warden on duty who finds a bomb or bombs is to estimate as fully as possible the amount of damage such a bomb could cause in the particular location hit. At the time of the take off of the planes a general air raid warning will be given by a steady siren blast and not interrupted by a wailing sound. No all clear notice will be given at the end of the drill.

In Tinley Park Walter Mager, Chief Air raid warden asks that all wardens and auxiliary police gather at the Tinley Park village hall, at 1:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Washington, D. C. AID TO RUSSIA

It is now permissible to reveal that several months ago about 300,000 tons of shipping were tied up in the Persian Gulf waiting to be unloaded.

This represented a super attempt to aid Russia, and although some ships were tied up for weeks, it was not the fault of the War Shipping Administration or the army. This was an attempt to show good faith to Russia when she was under terrific siege, when the battle of Stalin-grad was in the balance.

In some cases ships rode at anchor 50 and 60 days in the Gulf of Persia, waiting to unload, their crews idle.

Basic reason for this delay is that port facilities along the Gulf of Persia are backward if not medieval. There were no modern docks or cranes, and to unload locomotives without cranes is almost impossible. Also the railroad running north from Basra to the Caucasus is a meandering affair, never completely finished, originally built to reach the Shah's hunting lodge rather than port facilities on the Caspian.

Very little had been done by the British to improve this line, until American engineers got busy. Even before Pearl Harbor, when we first started sending aid to Russia, American railroad men were rushed to Basra. But it was a tough job, and was still unfinished last fall and summer. At that time the Nazis were knocking our Murmansk convoys off Norway into smithereens. So, to keep faith with Russia, ships were piled into the Gulf of Persia.

Today the situation, though still difficult, is greatly improved. In fact, hard-hitting Lew Douglas, dynamo of the War Shipping Administration, has pepped up unloading facilities in India, South Africa and other bad bottlenecks where previously U. S. ships had to wait three and four weeks to unload.

WORRIED OVER RAILROADS

Certain Washington officials acquainted with railroad operation are worried about temporary breakdowns of the transportation system, and consequent serious delays in moving war materials.

While it is admitted that the railroads are doing a "grand job," there is no overlooking the fact that the burden is proving too heavy.

Most serious is the situation in westward freight traffic. The country's railroads were built with the idea of moving traffic eastward, with bigger facilities as traffic moves east. But today, with a Pacific war to supply, the westward movement is greater than ever.

Breakdowns have occurred on single-track western lines, requiring re-routing in a circuitous manner, with delays of days and weeks in some cases. A transcontinental freight movement which once was accomplished in five days is now requiring ten and fifteen.

The remedy seems to be an increase in the centralized control of traffic. This smells like government operation, from the railroads' point of view, and they shy away from it. But officials in ODT who have no railroad connections regard such control as necessary for the wartime job.

Note: The burden for meeting these problems falls on the shoulders of V. V. Boatner, director of the division of railroad transport in the ODT. Boatner has now shifted to a "without compensation" basis so he can act as consultant for the railroads and be paid by them, while still officially working for the government.

FARMER CHENNAULT

Freshman Rep. Charles E. McKenzie of Louisiana expected to get a first-hand report on the war in the Far East when he shook hands with his most distinguished constituent, Gen. Claire Chennault, leader of American forces in China, who is visiting in the United States.

But the "Fighting Tiger" almost fumed McKenzie by inquiring: "How's farming down home? I can't wait to get back to my plantation."

McKenzie replied that he had just returned from Louisiana, that farmers in his district were doing "very well" considering the shortage of labor and machinery.

"Did you see my place in Concordia Parish?" asked Chennault anxiously.

"You bet, General," replied McKenzie, "and I can report that it is one of the most beautiful and best regulated plantations in Louisiana. I'd like to live there myself, on the banks of Lake St. John."

Note: While Chennault is at war, his Louisiana farm is being managed by his wife and children.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

¶ The carpet in the state department reception room, where Secretary Hull holds press conferences, is bordered with swastikas.

¶ William B. Lewis, chief of OWI's radio bureau, resented "Time's" calling him "smooth, dapper," and one of the "soap salesmen" in OWI. He called "Time's" Washington bureau threatening to write letters of protest to important people. "Write one to us," said Felix Belair Jr., head of the bureau, "if it's good, we'll print it."

U-Boat's Officer Addresses Mates

After the 33 survivors of a German submarine were landed at an Atlantic port they were given a hearty meal. Here the executive officer of the sub repeats in German instructions given him by U. 'Supermen' at Rest

When U. S. troops entered this Tunisian valley they found the graves of 120 "supermen" who had lost their lives in battle with the Allies. The scene of their final resting place is calm and peaceful now as American boys walk through the rows of crosses marking Nazi graves.

THINGS I NEVER KNEW AND STILL DON'T:

(Impersonating a Congressman, eh?)

That there is allegedly a law in Arkansas which permits a married man to whip his wife once a month . . . That manufacturers are experimenting with undergarments (for milady) made of paper . . . Whether you know that plane propellers get tired the same as you. After about 5,000 flight hours they get what is called "metal fatigue." (Read Winchell and become a Quiz Kid!)

That a recent scientific study disclosed that women talk about men, clothes, social affairs. Men talk about business, recreation, women . . . That critic George Jean Nathan says companionship is a matter of mutual weaknesses . . . Why people over here squawk about two meatless days a week (in New York, anyhow) when Switzerland, which is not at war, has three . . . That we have had only one left-handed President (Garfield).

That Emily Post, the etiquette authority, says it is all right for a woman war worker to thumb a ride to work from a gentleman motorist, if she displays her identification tag, if the motorist is driving past the plant and if the conversation is impersonal. Hey, Emily! They're not going to a tea party—it's a TNT party . . . (Now, no copy-cattin', Mr. Levant!)

Whether you've heard the one about the Jap warship that intercepted and destroyed five American torpedoes . . . That the sky isn't blue at all. Explorers of the stratosphere report that it really is deep purple . . . At Chinese funerals the guests are given kerchiefs to weep into . . . That a clock which throws its shadow on the ceiling has been invented for hospital patients.

That Whistler, the famed painter, tied his forelock with a white ribbon, (tee, hee) . . . That there are orange, cream-colored, pink and yellow bananas that taste like peaches, apples, pears and roses . . . That radio short-waves may be used for cooking food on ice . . . That you can live on ordinary grass, which contains all the vitamins you need . . . You cannot hide your strong emotions from your fingers, which get cold when you're in a dither.

That, according to Prof. Warren C. Middleton of DePauw U., six out of ten people do their dreaming in technicolor, and gals have more technicolor dreams than men. (How do I screen, Toots?) . . . That if you have snapshots or pictures of any scenes in Europe, Africa, Asia and the Far East, send them to Army Intelligence, War Dept., Washington, D. C. You may be able to shorten the war . . . That BBC has a most effective propaganda weapon. It broadcasts to Germany—recordings of Hitler's own speeches to remind his people of the extravagant promises he made.

That Sen. Soaper, the wit, describes an American as one who cheerfully responds to every call—from buying bonds to giving his blood—except to move back in a bus . . . Whether you've heard Bob Hope's swiftest crack about Irving Berlin: "Now that Berlin is in the army, we hope it isn't long before the army is in Berlin!"

That glove makers are experimenting with a new type of glove that can fit either paw—for the benefit of glove-lovers. (Ho, hum. Glove will find a way! Who threw that?) . . . That, in Denver, they have a law (Oh, I read it!) which prohibits anyone from photographing a woman in a bathing suit without her consent.

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY O'HARA

CHAPTER I

High up on the long hill they called the Saddle Back, behind the ranch and the county road, the boy sat his horse, facing east, his eyes dazzled by the rising sun.

The snug, huddled roofs of the ranch house, way below him, began to be red instead of just dark; and the spidery arms of the windmill in the gorge glinted and twinkled. They were smiling back at the sun.

"Good morning, mister!" shouted Ken, swinging his arm in salute; and the chunky brown mare he rode gave a wild leap.

To keep his seat, riding bareback as he was, he clapped his heels into her sides, and she leaped again, this time with her head down. Stiff-legged and with arched back she landed; and then bucked.

Once, twice, three times; and Ken was off, slung under her nose, hanging on to the reins.

She backed away and pulled to get free, braced like a dog tugging at a man's trouser leg.

She jerked her head viciously from side to side. Ken's teeth set in anger. "If you break another bridle—"

This thought made him crafty and his voice fell to a coaxing note. "Now Cigarette—be a good girl—thatsa baby—good girl—"

Ken got warily to his feet and went to her head, still talking soothingly but with insulting words.

"D'you think I'd ever ride a ordinary old plug like you if I had a horse of my own like Howard's?"

The frown faded from his face and his eyes took on a dreamy look. "If I had a colt—"

He had been saying that for a long time. Sometimes he said it in his sleep at night. It was the first thing he had thought when he got to the ranch three days ago. He said it or thought it every time he saw his brother riding Highboy. And when he looked at his father, the longing in his eyes was for that—for a colt of his own.

He must get on Cigarette again. First he had an apology to make. In all fairness, he must tell Cigarette that the fault had been his own. He had put his heels into her.

He knew exactly what his father would say if he told him about it. "Cigarette bucked and tossed me."

"What did you do? Put your heels into her?"

"Yes, sir."

He and Howard had to say Yes, sir, and No, sir, to their father because he had been an Army officer before he had the ranch, and believed in respect and discipline.

He took hold of her withers and back, jumped and pulled, landed well up against her, held stiffly there by his arms, then carefully swung his blue-trousered leg over; and slowly, just like his father, settled to her back, legs hanging straight down.

Cigarette was calm. He tightened his rein, squeezed the calves of his legs a little, and she moved off.

One of the exciting things about coming up from school in Laramie to the summer vacation at the ranch, was the weather. Always something doing. Winds and rainbows and calm sunny days, then an electric storm; or frosts or even blizzards. People said it was because of the eight thousand foot altitude.

He put his head back and sucked in the smell of the cleanness and the greenness and the snow and the windiness—all so sharp and heavenly.

This was what he had been waiting for. All through the last unbearable months of school, the endless classes, the examinations—

At this an uncomfortable feeling gripped him. His and Howard's report cards had arrived in yesterday's mail with a letter from the Principal of the school addressed to their father, Captain McLaughlin. And McLaughlin had slung them on the desk with some papers and bills to open later. By the time Ken got back to breakfast surely his father would have opened them. There was that examination—Ken knew he hadn't done very well—

He wondered what time it was now. He looked down at the ranch. It wouldn't be long before breakfast. Everybody was awake. Going downstairs, his mother would call, "Time to get up, boys!" His father was sitting up in bed with his hair rumpled, pajamas rumpled, hand reaching out for a cigarette.

Gosh—if his father had read the reports! And that wasn't all, there was the saddle blanket too, the lost saddle blanket.

He turned from looking at the ranch house and let his eyes sweep the hillside. Saddle blanket, saddle blanket—every time he asked his father for a colt, McLaughlin said, "I'll give you one when you deserve one."

A jack rabbit sprang up almost underfoot. Cigarette jumped, but Ken sat tight, and as the rabbit sailed away, he gave a yell and chased after.

Cigarette loved a good run.

Leaning back as Rob McLaughlin had taught his boys to do, feet forward and out, reins free, Ken rode like a steeple chaser.

Rabbit, pony and boy disappeared over the crest of the Saddle Back.

Nell McLaughlin pulled the drop-leaf cherry table out from the corner, opened the leaves so that it would comfortably accommodate four people and flung a red-checked cloth over it.

The roomy kitchen was full of bright sunshine from the windows which opened on the front terrace. It made squares of gold on the painted apple-green floor; and in front of sink and stove and baking table there were hooked oval rugs with gay flower patterns. A little brown cat sat by the stove washing her face.

Neither motherhood nor the hard living at the ranch had deprived Nell of her figure or her maidenliness. At thirty-seven, she looked not much older than when she had won a silver cup, at Bryn Mawr, for being the best all-round athlete of her class.

Of medium height, with a long slender waist, her curves were held where they belonged by trained muscles, and, as she walked, there was a lightness about her which came partly from natural vigor and partly from the way her narrow head lifted from the shoulders to face whatever was to be faced, a danger, a storm, a loved one, a hope or a fear.

Ken was late to breakfast.

Coming in, he looked first at his father to see if he had opened the report cards.

Then he said, "Good-morning, Mother, good-morning, Dad," pulled out the one empty chair—a green-painted ladder-back chair with seat woven of rawhide thongs—and sat down. His heart was beating hard.

Stiff-legged and with arched back she landed.

because his father's face had its glaring look and Howard was smug. Howard always got good marks.

McLaughlin picked up a card and a letter which was lying open beside his place. "I suppose it will be no surprise to you to hear that you have not been promoted," he said. "You might like to see your marks."

He tossed the card over to Ken. Nell McLaughlin handed Ken a blue bowl full of oatmeal covered with cream and brown sugar and said, "Let him eat his breakfast first," but Ken took the card and tried to focus his eyes upon it. He hated so to look, it was hard to see anything at all.

While he studied it there was a silence, Howard eating his bacon and smiling. Nell's face was troubled. She looked down, buttering her toast.

Ken read his marks through and finally came to the English examination.

He looked up and met his father's eye.

McLaughlin leaned forward. "Just as a matter of curiosity," he said, "how do you go about it to get a zero in an examination? Forty in history? Seventeen in arithmetic? But a zero! Just as one man to another, what goes on in your head?"

Ken had no answer. His face burned, and he bent over his plate and began on his oatmeal.

"Fortunately," he said reaching for a match, "there are almost two and a half months before school begins again. You'll do an hour a day on your lessons all through the summer to make up this work."

Nell McLaughlin saw Ken wince as if something had actually hurt him, and his eyes went to the wide-open window with a despairing look.

"Well," said McLaughlin, his voice like the crack of a whip. "Speak up. What have you got to say for yourself?"

"I dunno," answered Ken.

"What were you doing in that English exam? What were the questions you missed?"

"We were supposed to write a composition."

"What did you write?"

"I didn't get started."

"Didn't write a word?"

Ken shook his head.

"Couldn't you think of anything?"

"Yes, I had it all planned. I was going to write the story about how you lost your polo mare. How the Albino stole her from Banner—"

Ken's eyes went to his father's. "We could write anything we wanted, it had to be at least two pages—"

"Well, what happened to you?"

"I—I got to thinking about it. Thinking about Gypsy and the Albino—and what it was like, when he took her away—where he took her to—and all the wild horses in his band—and where they were all that time. All of that. I thought there was time, I thought the hour had just begun, and then the bell rang—"

There was a knock at the back door and McLaughlin shouted, "Come in."

Gus, the Swedish foreman, came in, carrying his big felt hat in his hand. His thickset body bent in a sort of bow aimed respectfully at Nell, and he looked first of all at her as he said, "Gude mornin', Missus," and then, "Mornin', Boss."

He did not come clear into the room, but propped himself by a hand on the door jamb, leaning there in his shy manner, a little smile like a child's turning up the corners of his mouth. His round pink face was framed in a mop of tight gray curls.

"What's today, Boss?"

Weather always entered into the plans. So before McLaughlin answered, he glanced out the window, noting the clear deep blue of the sky, and that the big white cumulus clouds were sailing across at a rapid pace.

Finally he said as if to himself, not looking at Gus, "A good day to move the horses."

"Ja, Boss. It's time de horses were off de meadows. De grass is growin' an we should have water on 'em soon."

Howard couldn't keep still. "Could I help you move 'em this year, Dad?"

Ken didn't ask because he had no hope.

McLaughlin turned to look at Howard, but he wasn't thinking of him and did not answer. He smoked and Gus waited. At last he said, "Yes. We've got a month before Frontier Days. I've got to get four of the older horses in shape to rent for the Rodeo. That means fool proof. And those three-year-olds will have to be broken. I can't let them go any longer."

"Ja, Boss."

"And catch up Shorty and saddle him for me. I'll be up at the stables in a half hour or less."

"Ja, Boss."

Gus went out.

McLaughlin put down his pipe and pulled his coffee cup towards him. There was a moment's silence, then Howard asked Ken, "What horse did you ride this morning, Ken?"

"Cigarette."

McLaughlin looked up. "You've been riding Cigarette?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you manage to catch her and tie her up without her breaking anything?"

"No, sir."

"What did she break, a bridle?"

"No—that is—not today. She broke a bridle yesterday."

"What did she break today?"

"The metal catch on the halter rope."

McLaughlin paused a moment and looked down at his small son.

"You're going to have to buck up, Ken. I don't know what to do with you. You never have your wits about you. Always wool-gathering. You lose a saddle blanket the first time you go riding—"

"But I found it again—"

"Yes, found the blanket and lost your horse. Trouble is, you don't try."

"I do try."

"I'd like to see some proof of it. Come, Howard. You can ride with me as far as the meadows and open the gates."

Ken pushed his chair back too. "Can't I help?"

"Certainly not. You have your study to do. Every morning right after breakfast. Remember that."

McLaughlin's scarred boots and heavy spurs clattered across the kitchen floor. Howard strode after, nobly refraining from casting a patronizing glance at Ken.

BUYING BONDS THE 'EASY' WAY

THIRTEEN BILLION DOLLARS worth of bonds, which Uncle Sam asked us to buy during the Second War Loan drive, and which we did buy, is a lot of money. To provide that amount would take practically all the coins and folding money in the United States if we were to put up the cash. But that is not the way it works.

John is working in a war industry plant. His wages amount to $50 a week. Each Saturday night, at his request, a $5 bill is withheld from his pay envelope to apply on his war bond purchase. That $5 bill is deposited in a bank to the credit of the United States. John spends much of the remaining $45 for things he needs, or deposits a portion of it in the bank. Out of what he spends, other Johns and Marys are paid, and they, too, buy war bonds. Out of what John deposits, the bank buys war bonds.

John's weekly pay is but a portion of an ever-revolving fund. Week by week it is paid to the government and again paid out to those producing what we must have to win the war. Week by week the ghost continues to walk because the Johns and Marys are financing their jobs by buying government securities. What they pay comes back to them, and in addition they have their government's IOU and will in time get it all back, plus interest.

CAPITAL NECESSARY TO KEEP LABOR AT WORK

BILL JONES has a job. That job provides food, clothing, shelter, a car, tickets for the movies, and other luxuries, as well as essentials for Bill and his family. To enable Bill to have a job means an investment of $3,000 in tools, including factory building and other essentials of production. Bill did not have $3,000, and others had to provide the tools which made Bill's job possible. It was the American capitalist system that provided the tools.

For each man who has a job in an American factory, there is an average of $8,000 invested in the tools and buildings which make a job possible. It means a total investment of something like 480 billion dollars. That is America's working capital which provides jobs for our 60 million workers. If we make it impossible for capital to provide the tools, we take away the jobs that support workers and their families.

That is what we are doing right now. The war will be over some day and then new tools must be provided to replace those used in war production. With government taking out of industry all industry can earn, leaving nothing with which to provide new tools, Bill Jones, and his co-workers, will be without jobs. We will have won a war and lost a peace. We will have destroyed the American system of free enterprise.

LABOR MONOPOLY AND GOVERNMENT

A BILL that would curb some of the more atrocious activities of the labor racketeers was introduced in the Colorado legislature. The bill, if enacted into law, will give union members control of their own organization by forcing regular elections of union officers by secret ballot, as well as forcing union officials to account for union receipts and expenditures, and calling for a secret ballot of members before a strike can be called. The self-appointed, self-perpetuating union officials notified the state government that if the legislature passed the bill, the law would not be obeyed. The labor racketeer has been cajoled and appeased until he considers himself above the law. He will permit no interference with his self-given right of extortion from those whom the government forces into union membership if they are to have a job.

TOP-HEAVY BUREAUS IN GOVERNMENT

SAMUEL INSULL created a great public utility structure by building corporations on top of corporations, until the top-heavy organization toppled over, and in the crash the public lost millions of dollars. To prevent a recurrence of such a catastrophe, congress created the SEC. But the government is not taking its own medicine. Bureaus and departments are being built on top of other bureaus and departments, until government has become as top-heavy as Insull's public utility structure. There is a limit, and should a top-heavy government topple over, the Insull failure would be but a drop as compared to an ocean of disaster.

DEBT LIMIT AND THE FAMILY

CONGRESS RAISED the federal debt limit to 210 billion dollars and it will reach that point by the end of this year. That means each man, woman and child has been mortgaged for $1,616, and over each family of five there is a mortgage of $8,080, on which there is an annual interest charge of not less than $161 for each family to pay. Our indebtedness at the close of 1943 will be eight times what it was at the close of the First World War.

BIBLE TEACHINGS ON WINE'S DECEITFULNESS

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 20:1; 23:29-35; Matthew 24:45-51.
GOLDEN TEXT—At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.—Proverbs 23:32.

Deceitful is a good word to describe both the product and the propaganda of the liquor business. Alcoholic beverages are in themselves most deceitful, and the methods by which they are sold to the public certainly cannot commend themselves to right-thinking people.

Intoxicants are associated with social preferment, festive occasions, radiant beauty, when they ought to be connected with the bleary eye, the babbling tongue, the ragged children and brokenhearted mothers. What about the men who have lost their positions and their characters, and the women who have paid with their virtue for their love of intoxicants? Why not picture them in the beautiful magazine advertisements?

I. Wine Is a Deceiver (Prov. 20:1).

Wine is personified here as an evil demon who leads men on in the hope of some pleasure or advantage, and then lets him down to the depths of destruction. It makes him think he is great and powerful, when he is only weak and degraded. It excites him to foolishness and wild boisterousness, when he would normally be sensible, quiet and orderly.

He who thought he was wise in partaking of its stimulation, finds himself deceived, and to his regret he realizes that he is a fool in the hands of a malicious deceiver.

II. Wine Is a Depraver (Prov. 23:29-35).

Depravity is a word not used as much as it was a generation ago, but it well describes the condition to which the drunkard comes in due time. And it is wine and other liquor which has depraved or corrupted him. A number of things appear in the text.

1. Liquor Destroys (vv. 29, 30). This is true morally, mentally, physically, and spiritually. Red eyes, wounds, complaining—these are only the outward signs of inward physical destruction of alcohol. Woe and sorrow speak of mental and social distress. The moral and spiritual destruction follow.

2. Liquor Deludes (vv. 31, 32). Its color, its sparkle and effervescence, its smooth appearance—all excite the anticipation of goodness and pleasure. And what does the drinker receive? The bite of the serpent and the sting of the adder. How true!

3. Liquor Demoralizes (v. 33). Alcohol is the handmaiden of immorality. "Strange women" come into the picture very quickly. They and the drinker soon find that drink sets them free from the limitations of decency and good sense, and the result is beyond description.

Those who defend liquor, or temporize with this problem, may as well recognize that they are encouraging the moral destruction of our boys and girls. It is a terrifying responsibility!

4. Liquor Dulls Man's Senses and Dazes Man's Mind (vv. 34, 35). Only a fool would lie down to sleep in the midst of the sea, or on top of the mast of a ship, or in the gutter, or against a lamp post. That's what drink does for a man.

His perceptions become so dull that he can be beaten, and he does not know he has been hurt. Exposed to inclement weather, he knows not enough to seek shelter. His money is lost or given away without concern on his part.

And when he sobers up—what then? His faculties are so dazed that he can think of only one thing to do, and that is to seek more wine. What is it that Scripture says about the dog and the fool? (See Prov. 26:11).

III. Wine Is a Destroyer (Matt. 24:45-51).

We have already touched on that point in its personal application, but now we see it in its bearing on his occupation and standing in the community.

The contrast is between the good servant who recognizes that his one and constant obligation is to serve, whether his master is present or absent, and the evil servant who violates his trust.

Notice that his first thought after cruelty to his fellow servants is to satisfy his appetite "to drink with the drunken."

Cruelty, mismanagement, unfaithfulness are tied up without question with drinking. Is it not so today? If you doubt it, read your daily newspaper. Why trifle with anything which keeps such evil company? You may find yourself mixed up with them beyond your ability to get free.

The final result is the loss of his position and of his life. Who will deny that this aptly states the end of the drunkard's way. But someone says: "I do not intend to be a drunkard. I only take a social drink." That is the way the drunkard started. Why begin to travel that road?

Transformation for Parlor at Little Cost

THE unit in the upper sketch is the handiwork of two amateurs; one using hammer and saw, and the other doing plain sewing. The size of your radio, your tall books and short books, as well as the things to be stored behind the doors will govern the proportions of the end units. Make a rough plan on paper first with all dimensions indicated. If you do not have the tools for making grooves the shelves may rest on metal angles screwed to the sides of the unit. These angles are useful also for strengthening the corners.

The construction of the bedding compartment is shown in the lower sketch. The padding is cotton batting and the covering is tacked in place through a lath strip.

SERVICE MEN'S NEWS

April 4, 1943
No Africa

Dear Friends:

Here goes for another brief letter to let you know I'm OK and to thank you for your letter of Feb. 23. Your letter came the other day and was very welcome. A letter always contains a more "human bit of news."

Im still getting the news although none of the March issues have arrived. You'd be surprised how a fellow looks forward to getting a paper from home.

There's not much news on my side of the ocean that the censors won't cut out so I'll have to keep my letter generalized quite a bit unless I try to tell you something of the country instead of the activity.

First of all there's the weather.
No matter how hot it gets during the day (and the African sun is the hottest thing I've ever seen), it still gets cold at night. Not just chilly but cold. They call Africa the "cold land under the hot sun" and truer words were never spoken.

The people are French and Arab.
The French are much the same as anyone in America, but the Arabs are very much different. They still dress in long robes or tunics. The men wearing brightly colored clothes and a turban and the women plain white. The women don't wear a turb-an.

an but have a sort of cape which they wear over their head and across their face leaving just a slit for their eyes. The Arabs I just spoke of are the well to do ones. The poorer ones are dressed in the same style but do not have the brightly colored clothes. They sew a bunch of old rags together and use them for their tunics. None of the arabs are very clean personally. But the richer ones take very good care of their clothes, where as the others are entirely filthy.

For money they try to sell the American soldiers souvenirs at out-landish prices or steal. They have no honor or pride and would just as soon as rob you as look at you.

Well I guess that takes care of the Arabs. The scenery is the kind that makes you want to come back when you can enjoy it. Needless to say there's not much chance for that now. Maybe sometime later.

Wish I were back home and it was peacetime again. That's a very much used phrase over here. Most of the fellows say that at least once a day.
It's very funny sometimes. Out of a clear sky someone will say, "Wish I were back home" and then we all break out in laughter. I think the laughter is to keep us all from getting the blues.

Well I'm about out of news etc. so I guess I'll sign off for this time.
Thanks again for writing.

Citizens Service Committee:
Received your inspiring Easter Greeting card along with a large box of assorted candies, cookies, cigarettes, etc. and want to take the pleasure at this time to express my deep appreciation and gratitude toward the Citizens Service Committee of Tinley Park and all the folks back home.

I don't know of any deeper or better satisfaction for any one in the armed forces, than to know that the folks back home in his own community are still thinking and pulling and doing their bit to make life more pleasant and enjoyable for their boys in the armed forces.

I regret very much that I did not write before this time, but as you all know life is a rather busy one in the army, and this is especially true of anyone working in a personnel office, in which you have new men coming in every day, and old men going out to various camps throughout the country and part of embarkations, as the basic training cycle down here is only five weeks, so one can hardly see that there is a continuous stream of men coming and going every day.

There has been no change of status as of my last letter. I'm still at the same camp, have the same address and am still working on pay rolls, with the exception that I now have the opportunity to live with my wife off of the post in a near by town and our address there is 502 Walnut St., Rolla, Mo. Don't know just how much longer I will remain at this camp as the WAACS are slowly but steadily taking over more and more personnel work, but will assure you that I will notify you of any change of address or status.

Have not received the Tinley Park Times for some months now for some reason or other, but hope to receive same regularly in the near future.
Thanking you again for remembering me and for all the wonderful letters from the folks back home. I remain,
Sincerely yours,

Cpl. Arthur H. Kampe,

Dear Friends:
Just a few lines to let you know that I received the Easter Card and the money order and wish to thank you for everything you have done for the boys. I also want to thank you for the paper which has been coming very regularly and is really appreciated.

There isn't much to write about because of censorship regulation.
Thanks again for the card and the money.

Dear Friends:
Thanks for the cookies and candy.
I haven't had much time to myself lately. There are 1200 Waves here and only a few soldiers. Say hello to

Dear Friends:

I received the Easter box you sent in tip top order and was very glad to get it and so was the rest of the boys in the Barracks. You see when someone gets a box they all have to sample it. We have got very nice weather down here, but the land is not good it is very hilly.

So I want to thank each and every one of you.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Arthur Lambrecht

Another appeal for waste kitchen fats has been received by Mrs. Herbert Folkers, local representative of the Womens Consumer Conservation Committee. The War Production Board has stated that an absolute minimum of 200 million lbs., of waste kitchen fats will have to be collected in 1943. This means that the present rate of collection must be more than doubled and quickly. American housewives and meat dealers have a desperately important job to do and they will do it providing they understand the problem, and what failure to reach this goal means.

"An adequate supply of fats and oils is essential to winning a war. The United States imported in 1941, nearly two billion lbs., of fats and oils, largely from the Far East. Most of these sources are now in the hands of the Japanese. It is imperative to us as a nation to make up this loss, and the salvaging of waste fats and greases is our best opportunity. It has become desperately necessary for every housewife to save and turn in every possible ounce of grease. If every housewife in America saved as little as table-spoonful of waste fat each day, it would total over 360 million pounds a year. Enough to make 540 million pounds of gunpowder. Any kind of clean metal container can be used to save grease. It does not have to be a coffee or shortening can. A fruit, vegetable or soup can is all right. Turn them in to your local butcher and keep the guns firing."

Folkers Market and the Balchowsky General Store will buy all kitchen fats brought in. Members of the Victory Club are assisting in this drive and will call at homes for containers if requested.

An air raid Alert will be sounded at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday May 25. Home defense officers are not asked to participate in this early morning test.

Having completed the Home Nursing courses prescribed by the Red Cross, certificates were received by twenty seven members of the Frankfort class instructed by Miss Florence Hollstein, at a special meeting held Wednesday evening at the school auditorium. Miss Hollstein distributed the pins and certificates at the regular Red Cross meeting held at the school Wednesday at 1:00 o'clock. Receiving this recognition are: Mesdames Walter Baumgartner, Clerk Bennett, Walter Carlson, E. Engelmann, Glenn Folkers, Herbert Folkers, Henry Geuther, Leroy Hansen, Fred Harnack, W. V. Hedges, Lester Heisner, Rose Hirt; Stanley Johnson, Arthur Lambrecht, Herbert Lambrecht, Harry Miller, Blanche Mitchell; Harvey Morgan; A. Schinkowski, Harold Schroth, Wm. Seeman, V. Vernon, Ed Vollrath; Ed Warning, Stanley Warning, Gilbert Wassner and Wm. Wischover.

On Tuesday May 25 at two p.m. members of the Womans Guild of St. Peters Evang. church will hold a special Guest Day meeting in the church sanctuary. Mrs. Waldemar Goffney being the speaker.

Funeral services were conducted at Manhattan last Friday morning for Mrs. Gene Schmidt, 62, who died at Silver Cross hospital following a brief illness. HINTS FROM PUBLIC SERVICE ON THE USE OF YOUR ELECTRIC WASHER

Sure we've been around a long time and have seen a lot of service. But we're a long way from the rag bag. We're still in good condition and our appearance is as neat as ever.

Of course all the credit goes to the lady of the house for washing us frequently and gently. She discovered long ago that when a garment gets extra dirty it requires hard rubbing and soaking which causes wear and fraying.

What's more, she knows how to wash clothes and how to use her electric washer for best results. What's the secret? None whatever. If you'd like to know how to get better results on wash day and how to conserve your family's washable clothes, we'll be glad to show you.

Run warm water into the tub of washer, but do not fill to water line. The water should only reach the water line after a load of clothes has been placed in the tub. Turn on the washer and pour in the soap until you have about 3 inches of suds.

Put white, slightly soiled clothes in first while the agitator is running. If clothes fail to turn over regularly, there are too many pieces. Washing time—about 7 minutes. If washed too long dirt and soap-scum are re-deposited in the fabric.

Where to start—Separate the fast from the unfast colors. To test new clothes, hold the end of the cloth in lukewarm, soapy water for a few minutes. If the water colors, cloth is "unfast."

Remove clothes from washer before draining the tub. Rinse until water is clear. The first two rinse waters should be of the same temperature as the washing water. The last rinse, or bluing, may be with cooler water.

In wringing, spread clothes out for uniform pressure on all parts of each article. Don't have the rolls too tight. For large pieces, like bedspreads and blankets, the pressure should be greatly reduced. In some washings this is done automatically.

The color-fast—After soaking the color-fast cottons and linens for 5 to 20 minutes to loosen the dirt, use fresh, lukewarm suds to wash them. The first rinse should be lukewarm, and the following rinses slightly cooler.

Slightly unfast—The washer can be used for clothes with slightly unfast colors. But you must not soak them. Use only lukewarm suds and wash quickly. Clothes with unfast colors should be washed individually by hand.

Electricity has gone to war—don't waste it!

THIS country likes its champions not only out in front but well in front. Not only on top, but high on top. It has become accustomed to a long parade of stars. With so many now in war service, you could get that angle in all the Derby excitement over Count Fleet.

The advance dope that he was another Man O' War caught the crowd's attention and stirred things up.

Many were using Count Fleet's fame to replace such names as Joe Louis, Billy Conn, Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams.

It took a Babe Ruth to lift baseball out of its rut around 1919 and 1920.

One feature concerning the 1943 attendance drop applies partly to the absence of big baseball names—at least the biggest names, with Bob Feller, Red Ruffing, Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams, Johnny Beazley, Terry Moore and others.

So the Derby crowd at least had its advance thrill in waiting to look at a horse that many picked as the best in 20 years.

The outside populace just wanted to look at the champ. Over twenty years ago thousands, who had no other interest in racing, came out to see Man O' War.

The Long Parade

No other nation has ever had such a quantity of skill and color in its top performers—John L. Sullivan, Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Bobby

CHAMPION DEMPSEY

Jones, Bill Tilden, Ty Cobb, Joe Louis, Man O' War, Walter Hagen, on and on and on.

What happened to baseball's get-away? Boxing, basketball and hockey have been packing them in all winter and early spring. Racing came along with a heavy blast, roaring in like a gale. This is easy to explain. With some extra billions of surplus cash floating about, betting got a big call.

Racing's Thrills

Millions of people wanted action and the thrill of the gamble. Racing provides this thrill. Baseball doesn't.

In addition to that, practically everything of a morbid nature that could happen to a game struck at baseball—Northern training, wrecking spring weather, the early mournful thud of the Balata Ball, the absence of stars, all the many millions either wearing uniforms or in some form of war industry.

This latter was one of the main wrecking features, since most of these millions are in the fanatical baseball age—between 18 and 40.

Different starting times must be used to give these crowds a chance for their recreation, in case it happens to be baseball.

It isn't likely that, with so many other sports riding high, baseball is headed for a collapse. But this theory can't be taken for granted. Someone must dig up the right medicine for a cure.

Dark Clouds

Whatever happens in other lines, one of baseball's darkest clouds comes from the shadow of Yankees, Cardinals and Dodgers. The Yankees have a big call on material left to their league. If Johnny Vander Meer is drafted, the Reds must leave the National league race to the Cardinals and Cubs. They may have to, anyway.

Three strong clubs can't keep interest boiling among the remaining 13 who might be left behind. It isn't possible.

Two one-sided races would be the final blow. But in spite of this danger there can, of course, be no punch-pulling to make any race close. That would be much worse than no race at all.

Under present restless conditions baseball, for one thing, can use the liveliest bat fodder to be found, even if most of the rabbits, now nibbling at spring gardens, must be called in for the sacrifice.

WHILE there have been three managerial changes in the majors this year, Mr. Oswald Louis Bluege of the Washington Senators is the only authentically new guiding star of the 1943 baseball wars.

Two of the changes came to pass in the American league. Bluege became manager in Washington following the resignation of Bucky Harris and Steve O'Neill succeeded Del Baker in Detroit. Harris moved to Philadelphia in the National league replacing Hans Lohert.

One can safely say that Ossie Bluege isn't the most widely known baseball player in the business. In fact, he's probably the least known star of the past generation.

It so happens that he broke into professional baseball more than 20 years ago—back in 1920 with Peoria. But outside of his fellow artisans and a close group of friends, he is as well-known as your Aunt Emma.

Ossie Bluege

Dependable

For about 17 years Bluege was a dependable infielder for Washington. Dependable, mind you, not colorful, nor flamboyant, nor exciting. When a man puts that many years in the big leagues the historians usually have gathered enough material to fill a good sized volume.

Not so with the mysterious Ossie. In this case the record books don't provide enough information for a thumbnail sketch. Aside from the necessary cold statistics, the fact that he has blue eyes and brown hair and that his hobbies are "bowling, skating and reading good literature," the records are lifeless things.

But Bluege was an exceptionally able infielder. The figures show that he had a major league batting average of .272, a lifetime fielding average of .962. An outstanding performer in the 1924 world series, he accepted 32 chances on third base—some sort of a record.

Clark Griffith, president of the club, hardly expects Bluege to win the pennant, but nevertheless, Washington is one club in the league which is stronger than it was in 1942. The hard hitting outfield, including Bob Johnson, former Athletic slugger, may cause quite a bit of trouble here and there.

For eight seasons Bucky Harris went along with screwball importations from Cuba and raw alumni of such farms as Trenton, Springfield, Chattanooga and Charlotte.

When Griffith finally decided to spend a bit of money in a Double A league he came up with Jimmy Pofahl, whose arm isn't known for its power and durability.

Unquestionably this is a good year for a man of Bluege's talents and personality to break in as a manager. The draft board is much more important to him than the front office. The standards of past days will be largely forgotten.

Clark Griffith

whose arm isn't known for its power and durability.

New Deal

When Harris stepped out of the American league to handle the Phillies his move caused little or no consternation. The club finished in last place in 1942, winning 42 games while dropping 109. The prospects of moving up are not too good. But at least they have a new deal and the old feeling of futility is not so pronounced. The Phillies lack pitching, catching, fielding, hitting and most of the other things you can think of. But if Harris has any enthusiasm left after eight years with Washington, he may strengthen the club to some extent.

Steve O'Neill came back from the minors to take over the Detroit Tigers following the reign of Del Baker. Steve moved to Detroit with a not too strong leadership record in Cleveland. He succeeded Walter Johnson as boss of the Indians in midseason of 1935, when he finished third. In 1936 he finished fifth, and the following year fourth. Then came Oscar Vitt—and the Indian revolution.

But O'Neill is known for his ability to handle pitchers, and since this is doped as a good year for hurlers, Steve may bring the club up to fair strength.

SPORTS SHORTS

Jimmy Brown, son of OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, is an outfielder on the University of Michigan squad.

Playing with Beaumont last year, Dick Wakefield led Texas league outfielders with 17 assists and five double plays.

The words of Fritz Crisler, Michigan's athletic leader, should be remembered: "We plan to continue a complete schedule in all sports even if Michigan does not receive a dime of revenue."

Victory Garden Is Ration Book's Friend

Opportunity to Save 2,772 Ration Points

A 25 by 50-foot garden plot plus 25 tomato plants, a couple of pounds of seed and someone to plant, harvest and can them, equals 2,772 ration points saved in the course of a year.

So let ration points, as well as nutritive values and the family budget, provide the yardstick by which you measure returns from your 1943 garden. That's the advice given by Prof. F. G. Helyar of Rutgers university, chairman of the state Victory garden and food conservation committee.

And remember, if you have not yet started your Victory garden, it's not too late. But you must get busy now.

The plan on which he has figured the 2,772-ration point return, based on present point values, includes two rows of tomato plants, each row 50 feet long; two rows of snap beans, planted from a pound of seed; two rows of carrots, planted with an ounce of seed; and a similar planting of beets and of lima beans, for which an ounce and a pound, respectively, of seed will be needed. Professor Helyar estimates that on the average the tomatoes will yield three bushels of fruit, or 54 quart jars and 1,481 ration points. The other crops, measured on the same basis, will produce as follows: snap beans—one bushel, 16 quarts, 358 points; carrots—one bushel, 18 quarts, 403 points; beets—one bushel, 16 quarts, 256 points; and lima beans—one bushel (in the pod), nine quarts, 274 points.

Measured from this standpoint, it is obvious that the garden will not only help keep an average-size family fed in accordance with good standards of nutrition for the year, but it will save them from spending their ration points for foods that will probably be drastically needed by families in metropolitan and city areas who are unable to garden, Professor Helyar adds.

Commercial Uses for Our Citrus Fruits

Back in 1920, grapefruit was an inexpensive delicacy. Have you heard of the woman who boiled one for hours and could not make it tender? Today, five times as much grapefruit is grown and it is well known by rich and poor.

Our grapefruit is grown mostly in Florida, Texas, Arizona and California. California and Florida produce 97 per cent of our oranges and virtually all lemons are grown in California. These citrus fruits are used almost entirely for food, but there is still a great waste from canning and marmalade making and a need to find non-food uses for culls.

Orange and lemon oil is produced commercially in California. Grapefruit oil is a very new product valued in the textile industry to fix turkey red dye. The peel and pulp of citrus fruits may also become an important source of pectin which is sold commercially to add to other fruit juices in making jelly. It may also be possible to recover some of the valuable vitamins and turn them to commercial uses.

Citric acids are being produced for food flavors and uses in medicine. Novel food products are appearing, such as citrus powder and citrus butter. Canning of grapefruit hearts and juice has been on the increase, about 62 per cent coming from Florida canneries and 36 per cent from Texas.

Until the present European war, the United States was on the way to developing a fine export trade in fresh oranges and canned grapefruit.

Today, due to shipping space, there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men—but you can still send packages to soldiers in the U. SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Neither South American sources of natural rubber nor expansion of Guayule Cryptostegia and all other rubber-bearing shrub production will produce any large amount of satisfactory rubber for some years, according to government agencies.

In 1941, 86 per cent of all travel by Americans was in cars.

No gas! No cars! Ban on pleasure driving brought a drop of about 80 per cent in the passenger cars on the streets of New York City. Joy walkers had a holiday in the automobile deserted main streets.

Five in a car instead of just the driver and one passenger means that 8 tires are saved, if the average of three cars to five war plant workers is considered. The amount of rubber in 8 tires is enough for 72 gas masks, or for life rafts and rubber life jackets for 8 plane crews.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood. You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder. There is no longer any doubt as to the fact that the Session will run until July 1.

The committee system is responsible for many difficulties. On Tuesday thirteen committees attempted to have hearings on Bills within a two-hour period. Since the appropriations committee has about sixty members some member invariably raises the question of a quorum at nearly every meeting. Members are literally jerked out of other committee meetings to produce the number required to make a quorum.

The budget as presented on Wednesday by Governor Green is a monumental document about one and one-half times the size of the suburban telephone directory. I can recall budgets of a few years ago when they were printed in small booklets of twelve to sixteen pages. The budget has been excellently prepared and its clarity will make the study of appropriation bills a much easier procedure.
